The primary reason to use Photoshop for image editing is to include a wide variety of options for adjusting and manipulating the look of your images. Because of Photoshop's capacity to allow you to retouch images, blur backgrounds, remove unwanted people or objects, and even make your images look like movie stars, you need to take a closer look at what's available. Although I've never been a "professional" photographer or an editor, I still find Photoshop to be a valuable tool that enables me to create images that I never would have attempted without it. Photoshop makes modifying images easy and intuitive and lets you sort the retouching and editing in a logical order. I prefer Photoshop to any other editing software because it offers more options, features, and flexibility and a very user-friendly interface. You may prefer GIMP, an open source cross-platform image-editing program, or other image-editing programs. But Photoshop is a big, powerful, expensive program, so you're better off if you feel comfortable using it. In this book, I first show you the basic steps in preparing to use Photoshop for image-editing tasks. I demonstrate the use of image-editing tools and how to import or create images as well as preserve image files with the Smart Object feature. I then explain the primary Photoshop functions, including working with layers and selections, the tonal and color ranges in Photoshop, the status bar, and how to use the Levels and Curves tools. I show you how to perform actions such as moving, rotating, and cropping images, as well as how to attach a selection from one image to a layer in another, duplicate layers to make complex, layered images, and how to merge layers to combine features into a single image. I show you how to perform many of the common tasks that crop up when you retouch a picture, including removing unwanted people or objects, blurring or softening the background, and cloning new people or objects into an image. Finally, I walk you through the complete image-editing process, from retouching existing images to creating a complex composite image. I show you how to combine layers and affect the overall picture by altering color and brightness using curves, how to use layer masks to create a soft skin in an image with great details, and how to work with individual colors to give images a more natural look, with warm and cool colors. I also show you how to use selective color for a specific part of an

[Pulmonary artery dissection: video-assisted open repair using the transanatomical approach]. Since 1993, total correction of pulmonary artery dissection has been performed successfully using the microsurgical technique. However, this approach is associated with a long operating time and increased ischemic time of the heart. We present the results of video-assisted repairs, using the transanatomical approach, of 4 patients with pulmonary artery dissection. This approach is a less invasive alternative and could be one of the best methods to treat these patients.[Chromosome aberrations and interindividual variability in chromosomal radiosensitivity]. Chromosomal aberrations in lymphocytes from different individuals can be induced by exposure to ionizing radiation at various doses. In some cases, these aberrations can be induced by relatively small doses of radiation, while in others, they seem to be dose dependent. In this article, data on individual differences in the incidence of chromosomal aberrations after exposure to different doses of radiation, either X-rays or gamma-rays, are reviewed. Interindividual variability in both the induction of aberrations in individual chromosomes and the yield of aberrations per cell can be expressed in two ways: (1) in the initial yield, in which the differences in individual variability in the number of aberrations can be expressed as a trend to the dose of radiation and/or (2) in the final yield, in which the differences can be expressed as a trend to the magnitude of the initial yield. In the initial yield, it has been observed that: (1) high initial yields of chromosome aberrations can be induced by low doses of X-rays and gamma-rays; (2) the yield of aberrations is higher in cells of irradiated fibroblasts than in cells of irradiated lymphocytes; (3) the yield of aberrations is lower in cells of radioresistant organisms than in cells of radiosensitive organisms; (4) there is a close correlation between initial and final yields of chromosome aberrations in cells of the same species. In the final yield, it has been observed that: (1) the percentage of aberrant cells is lower after X-ray irradiation than after gamma-ray irradiation; (2) the yield of aberrations is higher in binucleates than in mononucleates; (3) the yield is higher in cells of irradiated cells than in cells of unirradiated of DPPH scavenging activity or reducing power. Fig. 6 DPPH scavenging assay (A) and reducing power assay (B) of the freeze-dried powder of Boswellia serrata and Aframomum melegueta. Gallic acid was used as a positive control Conclusions {#Sec20} ===== The lipophilic extraction of A. melegueta and B. serrata using supercritical carbon dioxide resulted in a concentrate rich in hydrocarbons and triterpenes. The extract obtained from A. melegueta was less rich in hydrocarbons and possessed higher antioxidant activity when compared to the lipophilic extract of B. serrata through DPPH and ABTS scavenging assays and reducing power assay. These findings suggest that A. melegueta extract is the more suitable extract for the production of a solid lipid food supplement having antioxidant and bioactivity properties. A. melegueta is also known to be a valuable medicinal plant for the treatment of diabetes and hypertension. Thus, A. melegueta lipid extract might be used as a starting material for the development of a new drug delivery system. ABTS: 2,2'-azino-bis(3-ethylbenzothiazoline-6-sulfonic acid) diammonium salt AFB: Air dried fermented Boswellia fruits AOAC: Association of Official Analytical Chemists BC: Blank control β-CD: beta-cyclodextrin CF: Compressed film DPPH: 2,2-diphenyl-1-picrylhydrazyl radical ICR: Imprinting control region NIL: Non-informative locus PA: Percentage area PC: Pressure control PCT: Pressure-controlled temperature SFE
