As far as I know, this is not possible in IE8, but the checkboxes are working fine in Firefox and Chrome. I tried setting the background-color property of the checkbox, but there still remains a visible border, and the checkbox is not being displayed fully. Is there a CSS / HTML trick to get the checkbox working on IE8? A: Here's the solution I came up with. The checkbox is wrapped in a div that gets an id. This way, in the css I only have to specify the css for the div. `body #checkbox-css-test-box { background-color: #00F; } body #checkbox-css-test-box input { background-color: #F00; }` A: It appears IE8 has no support for checkboxes. Even if you use a background image instead of a checkbox image, you get the same result. FILED NOT FOR PUBLICATION

...it's your ultimate fundamental aim, at the end of the day. People obsess about their name. But in the end do they really know what they're doing? This is a great clip from the 2001 Oscars between Rita Moreno and Whoopi Goldberg...and Whoopi's comment about the male audience was... "The porn star is more appealing than you. We like what you like and you like what we like."...As a woman, Whatopi Goldberg is defining that goddess reaction: Guilt by association, guilt by association, guilt by association... If you are a woman and you don't display this woman gaze, this is where the guilt and failure is. You can get lost. If you go to Glee Club, you will be lost. And that is not your fault. Your gift of gab is up to god to decide. The truth is Jesus provoked both good and evil, the world is being tugged at in a direction...He created the bad and the good directions He also gave us our own, individual evil and good...So, here we are in a place of you either follow your evil or your good... Most notably "evil" forces are trying to get us to reject Jesus...and it's time to get out of bed. The world is being tugged in a direction that can only result in bringing in hell... Or we can reject the "evil" and walk it back... Pray. Live. Pray.... God wouldn't have had this come about if there was nothing to show for it...so we stay at home, watch TV, turn into our parents or go to the mall because that's what we do. Let's run don't walk... when the evil is making the move... Who wants to stay and see it play out? You. Can you shake off that TV/Porn/9 to 5 business, and dedicate your life...? The truth is Jesus provoked both good and evil, the world is being tugged at in a direction...He created the bad and the good directions He also gave us our own, individual evil and good...So, here we are in a place of you either follow your evil or your good...Most notably "evil" forces are trying to get us to reject Jesus...And it's time to get out of bed.
