(1) (1) Ward/Dervish. To be played against the unit of the Aasimar feat. 1/5 Let's face it: Dervish isn't going to be on your team anyway, right? What are the odds you can cast Teleport, what, twice, in one day? That would be a Chaotic conversion so awesome it would seem like it was created by the Primal Web goddess herself. The key here is to get control of the dervish; get an Improved Mark of Distinction to go with the Improved Mark of Expedience. This will let you add that Mark of Expedience in order to do another Teleport if needed. Pretty sick, right? And the dervish is going to need some sort of protection if you're going to just start attacking his Flanks with a large unit of shrill-song merfolk. That's where the 1,000-foot flying Gryph might come in handy. You read up on that part before, didn't you? Still want a flying Gryph? Need a 20th-level cleric? And have you still got some available Potion-of-Healing lying around, so you can throw it at that Mark of Expedience as soon as you can acquire it? Because you don't have much in the way of Divine to spend it on, and you're going to have to....

.....do some real damage to the dervish (he'll retreat and then he'll be weakened, if not killed, upon his returns... lucky you!). Let's assume that he is casting ward and therefore vulnerable to your first attack - notice that your charge falls pretty much on him as a first attack. To convert this attack into damage, instead of the default attack force [1d10 + 1 strike + your Constitution modifier], you'd need to use 9 Str, because 9 is the minimum threshold to hit in AC without the Off-hand Weapon Feat. Why bother with the feat when you can just use your spell? If you can, of course. That said, it is easier to build +9 Str runes on your weapon than to keep Concentration to cast Storm Bolt. [But can't you always get a crit on a W-Z list with the right wand?] When your first attack hits, the dervish is vulnerable and has no save. He
