Help in removing [Machinist, The (2004) widescreen 720p BluRay x264-iCMAL.mkv] withQ: Does the class registered with __construct() need to call it? Does the class registered with __construct() need to call it? For example: class A{ public $a; public function __construct() { var_dump($this->a); //is ok to access $a property directly } } class B{ public $b; public function __construct() { $this->b = new A(); } } $b = new B(); Or does class B should be change to this one: class B{ public $b; public function __construct() { $this->b = new A(); } }

For example: class A{ public $a; public function __construct() { var_dump($this->a); //is ok to access $a property directly } } class B{ public $b; public function __construct() { $this->b = new A(); } } $b = new B();

A: PHP didn't invent this, this is for C, but it works fine for C++ classes too. If you don't use the object in that constructor and then create an instance of the same class and use the object, it won't call any constructor, so the object won't have any members and so won't be an A object, so it will be a NULL. That's almost what happens with your 2nd example, except that your class B doesn't do what you thought it did. Your example with `new A();` is a common mistake. If you have the line `new A();` on its own, it's a separate call to construct a
